FELLOWS' ORIGINAL

WORM LOZENGES.

WE can with confidence point to FELLOWS' WORM LOZENGES as the most perfect remedy for those troublesome pests,

INTESTINAL WORMS.

After years of careful experiment, success has crowned our efforts, and we now offer to the world a vermifuge without a single fault, being safe, convenient, effectual and pleasant. No injurious result can occur, let them be taken in whatever quantity. Not a particle of calomel enters their composition. They may be used without fear or preparation, and at any time. Children will eagerly devour all you give them, and ask for more. They never fail in expelling Worms from their dwelling-place, and they will always strengthen the weak and emaciated, even when he is not afflicted with worms.

Various remedies have, from time to time, been recommended, such as calomel, oil of wormseed, tansy, pennyroyal, &c., producing dangerous and sometimes fatal consequences. After much research, study and experiments, continued for several years, the proprietors of FELLOWS' WORM LOZENGES have succeeded in producing this remedy, free from all objections, and positively safe, pleasant and effectual. They do not kill the worms, but by making their dwelling-place disagreeable to them, induce them to seek other quarters. In order to assure consumers of the genuineness of these Lozenges, the analysis of Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer, is appended.

"I have analyzed the WORM LOZENGES prepared by Messrs. FELLOWS & CO., and find that they are free from mercury and other metallic or mineral matter. These Lozenges are skilfully compounded, pleasant to the taste, safe, yet sure and efficient in their action. Respectfully, A. A. HAYES, M. D., Assayer to the State of Mass."

Price 25 cents per Box: Five for $1.

GEORGE W. SWETT, Proprietor of the New England Worm Lozenges, 138 Hanover St., Boston, Mass., Sole Agent for the United States, to whom all orders should be addressed.

American & Foreign Patents.

R. H. EDDY,

SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

Late Assistant Examiner in the U. S. Patent Office, Washington, and under the Act of 1837.

No. 78 State Street, (opposite Kilby street,) Boston.

AFTER an extensive practice of upwards of twenty years continue to secure Patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Bonds, Assignments, and all papers or drawings for Patents, executed on reasonable terms, with despatch. Research made into American and Foreign works, to determine the validity and utility of Patents of invention and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents, or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

During eight months the subscriber, in the course of his large practice, made on twice rejected applications, SIXTEEN APPEALS; every one of which was decided in his favor by the Commissioner of Patents.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHAS. MASON,

Commissioner of Patents.

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they can not employ a man more competent and trustworthy, and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.

EDM'D BURKE,

Late Commissioner of Patents.

"Mr. R. H. Eddy has made for me THIRTEEN applications, in all, but ONE of which patents have been granted, and that one is now pending. Such uncontestable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to procure their patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases, and at a very reasonable charge. DR. L. CHASE,

(LATE OF PORTLAND),

THE CELEBRATED

INDIANOPATHY, CANCER & HUMOR

DOCTOR,

HAVING purchased the residence of M. A. Wood, 54 Hammond Street, Bangor, Maine, would be happy to be consulted by all who are afflicted with Cancers, Cancer Humors, Tumors, Scrofula, Leprosy, Salt Rheum, Fits, Neuralgia, Bronchial Affections, Catarrh, Rheumatism, Sick Headache, Liver Diseases, Female Weaknesses, Piles, Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, Diseases of the Kidneys, Stiff Joints, Gravel, Diabetes, &c., &c.

Dr. Chase has practiced in his profession for sixteen years, and in that time has spent two years in Florida and Cuba, for the purpose of gaining a correct knowledge of the most efficient remedies used by the various tribes of Indians of that country, and by great expense has gained many valuable secrets which have heretofore been unknown to the world.

In Cancer he claims superiority over all other Physicians of the age, for he never fails to perform a cure when taken in a proper stage.

His mode of curing Cancers is by the application of a plaster, which is strictly vegetable, and will have no effect upon the healthy flesh; and in no case uses a knife as does Dr. Greene, of Boston.

He also boldly asserts that he can tell every individual their disease and location of their pains, and describe their feelings in almost every case, more minutely than they can possibly themselves.

Dr. Chase is not a Clairvoyant, but conducts his examinations on a strictly scientific principle, and will challenge any professed medium for a test examination.

Office hours from 9 A.M. to 8 P.M. Examinations free. Office at residence No. 54 Hammond Street.

TEMPERANCE DISCUSSION. Messrs. John Neal and M. L. Stevens of Portland are discussing the question of prohibition or license over their own signatures, in the Press. This is the proper way of conducting newspaper discussions or of printing communications upon all controverted topics. Writers who are unwilling to put their names to what they write show either an excessive modesty or that they intend to say that for which they are unwilling to take the open responsibility or in the soundness and truth of which they do not feel over confident. There is a responsibility in an open discussion over the writers' names, which prevents its running into those extremes of personality or abuse which we too often have to combat in anonymous disputations. It also relieves the conductors of newspapers from much perplexity and embarrassment which should not be put upon them—by placing the responsibility fully where it belongs—upon the writers themselves. Editors who are known have to take the responsibility of their own writings—and why should not correspondents?

In regard to this temperance or liquor question, upon which we may expect considerable discussion the present year, we are perfectly willing to state our own opinions upon all proper or necessary occasions, as we have already done, under the responsibility of our own name—and is it too much to ask that our correspondents shall do the same? The example has been well set by the writers in the Press, and we trust it will be followed, as it ought to be in the discussion of all controverted subjects, hereafter.

We are free to say that we believe the present prohibitory law an effective one, and if enforced as it may be, it is amply sufficient to sweep away with the greater part of the liquor traffic in the State. We also believe, as we have before stated, that the amendment of the law to be voted upon in June is likely to be more injurious than beneficial to the temperance cause in its operation, if adopted. In the discussion for and against, a license law, now going or before a committee of the Massachusetts Legislature, the friends of prohibition are showing that the present prohibitory law has been well enforced in most of the towns of the State, since the establishment of the State Police; and that it is sufficient in its provisions to stop all the open traffic at least, and as much of the secret selling and drinking as it is possible to stop by any law. A "stringent" license law would certainly be inefficient, and more difficult of execution even than the prohibitory law.

But while these are our opinions—to be expressed when necessary—we shall hold our columns open to well written communications on both sides, not libellous in their character, and not too burdensome in length.

Rev. Ezekiel McLeod, editor of the Religious Intelligencer, died at Fredericton, N. B., on Sunday night of last week.

It seems that the roll of Robert Toombs' slaves will be called at a Georgia ballot-box instead of at Bunker Hill.

The Republican State Central Committee of Virginia will call a mass convention of the Union Republican party of the State, without distinction of color, at the African church, Richmond, on the 19th of April.

A milk seller in Cambridge was recently tried for putting a quart of water to every four quarts of his milk. Radicalism is extending, and the country will not much longer be saved. Next we shall hear of some poor devil being prosecuted for borrowing an umbrella without leave.

The Richmond Times asks:—"What gentleman in Virginia can bring his mind to be a candidate for negro votes?" An exchange says:—"If our southern Democratic friends decline to receive office at the hand of negroes, we dare say they can import any number of northern Democrats who are troubled with no scruples of that kind."

John H. Surratt's trial will probably be commenced at an early day, although no time has as yet been fixed. Several witnesses summoned from a distance have arrived, and others are daily expected. Surratt continues in good health and is permitted every pleasant day to take exercise in the courtyard of the jail. He converses freely about his case and confidently expects to be acquitted.

Some of the friends of his Accidency are talking out of school. According to their revelations, Andrew Johnson will make a desperate struggle to be elected to the United States Senate, if he is permitted to serve out his Presidential term. They boast that with the aid of the national patronage he will so set the stakes as to make this result easy. He forgets that Tom Jesson reverses the Johnson that was, not the Johnson that is.

GEN. LEE AND RECONSTRUCTION. It is reported that Gen. Lee is heartily in favor of calling a State Convention under the reconstruction act. He thinks the people of Virginia should make every effort to avert their ruin; that it is idle to talk of resistance or inactivity. He acknowledges that the bill is a bitter one, but says he can suffer nothing more than Appomattox. Commenting on this a Richmond paper says:—"Who will now say that Virginia will degrade and dishonor herself by acting under the Sherman law? Gen. Lee can now be placed among the advocates of reconstruction."

MARVELOUS TRAVELERS OF OLD. Ancient Chinese travelers tell wonderful stories. Friar Odoric, who spent three years—from 1329 to 1331—in Northern China, says the Khan's palace at Pekin was of vast size and splendor, supported by twenty-four columns of gold, and that its walls were hung with skins of real leather, said to be the finest in the world. In the middle of the palace there was a great jar, more than two paces in height, entirely formed of a precious stone called carbuncle, and so fine that its price, he was told, exceeded the value of four towns. It was ringed around with gold, and fringed with dragons of large pearls. [illegible] gilded gob[illegible] for the "[illegible]" with thirsted. WASHINGTON, March 25.

The internal revenue receipts for the present fiscal year, to Saturday, were 211 millions.

It is unusual to have such small receipts for a month past, the year's aggregate, as upon the 30th of June next, will equal the whole amount of last, only for this year, upon which the tax bill of that month was based. There is a large and rapidly increasing party in the Senate, who will be unwilling to provide for the admission of any rebel State that does not provide for the education of its freedmen.

The Senate to-day rejected the nomination of William A. Coyle as postmaster at Cincinnati, O. H.

A caucus of the Republican Senators and Representatives was held in the Hall of the House of Representatives to-night, General Schenck acting as Chairman. The sole object of the meeting was to take action concerning future political movements North and South, and Messrs. Schenck, Dawes, Pike, Ashley, Wilson of Mass., and others spoke in the necessity of completing their Congressional organization. The debate was free from excitement. After appointing a committee, consisting of one from each State, the caucus adjourned.

Secretary Wilson, in reply to a letter from Mr. Watkins, of Texas, says:

"In reply to your question—Does the law now in force disfranchise the rank and file, who had never taken an oath to support the Constitution of the United States, and then engaged in the rebellion, or gave aid and comfort to it? The class of persons are disfranchised, and other persons are entitled to vote. Persons are mentioned in the Constitutional Amendments, so that all persons know who are disqualified and disfranchised."

Our Public Schools.

While pagan nations showed their power
By pyramid and frowning tower
And kings in barbaric pomp and pride
By grand triumphal arches wide;

Our fathers on this western shore
A loftier rank of glory bore
On truth their reared our empire's walls
And o'er the world post Freedom's palls.

These halls, by schools and churches owned
First saw the human soul enthroned
Where Wisdom holds the rule of state,
And virtue stands to guard the gate.

Each school house is a mightier fount
Than flowed rom old Parnassus mount
Here peasants free with sages talk
And ploughboys rise with kings to walk

Let learning's temples be our boast,
Let Truth lead up our every host,
Then can we defy despots prophecy
Of peril and of anarchy

Let Knowledge, mightier than the sword,
Be our Freedom's ever guard,
And send heralds evangelic forth
Throughout the nations of the earth

THE LOVE THAT LIVES

BY MRS J D CHAPLIN

Love is the poetry of human existence But we must not limit this holy passion to that admiration of and affection for the young and beautiful of one sex and the noble and brave of the other That is but the A B C to the sciences of love, the first entrance into a path which stretches beyond the reach of mortal vision, to the land where nought that is holy can ever die, and where our love shall be purified till it becomes like the love of the angels

Such is real affection—not that ephemeral fancy that is awakened by a bright eye or a rosy cheek and which wanes when these fade, or are supplanted by brighter and rosier ones

The love that outlives youthful charms was in the breast of Abraham when he stood up before his dead and spake to the sons of Heth, saying, I am a stranger and sojourner with you, give me possession of a burying place with you that I may bury my dead out of my sight And all down through the ages since then, there have been beautiful and touching examples of love, increasing in strength down to the dark night of life Heaven looks not on a lovelier sight than two hearts joined in youth growing close and closer together, until in their second childhood they are but as one soul, so that separation is death, and the same knell sounds for both Like the ancient wife immortalized in John Anderson, my Jo, one can say to the other,

'We climb the hill thegither
And mony a canty day
We've seen we one another
Now we nain tether down
But hand in hand we go
And sleep thegither at the foot,
John Anderson, my Jo

On one of the great thoroughfares, and within sight and sound of the whizzing trains there stands, under the shadow of glorious old elms, a quaint little black cottage, with a porch, from which is the only one, and that through the kitchen The house and its surroundings are primitive in the last degree, and we might go far from the great world to find its equal in simplicity as we saw it a score of years ago, and as it stands to day

This house, The Saint's Rest,' as some playfully call it, has its own little history humble as it was, and we will tell the ale in the words of the gentle holy man, who for more than fifty years called it home'

It is a homely old place to ask city folks to' the old man said as we visited him for the first time 'but it is all dear home to us and has as big a welcome for you as the grandest house in town' And then he added, with a merry twinkle in his gray eye, 'we're to add a front to our house sometime when ever mother's ready She has only to speak the word and it's done I've been waiting were than fifty years to do it'

A quiet smile lighted up the fine features of the aged wife as she said I think this will do now for the rest of our pilgrimage It is as comfortable as any house and it satisfies our desires and that makes happiness you know'

'The way we came to have such a rough old place when we could afford better as well as our neighbors, was this said the old man When my father married the farm was divided to give him half but he took my mother home to grandfather's house that stood between those two elms where you see the old cellar Bye and bye there were three of us little fellows to romp and tear round —Mother felt that ever so small a home of her own would be pleasanter for us so my father not wanting to invest his money in a great house to the damage of his land set up this, just as it stands now,—that was ago on seventy years ago,—intending in a few years to add a front to it We had scarcely moved into it when he fell sick and died Then the old people wanted us to come and stay with them, but my mother chose to stay with her children As we grew up grandfather said she had better build but take and the house satisfied her, and that when I married I might build to suit myself A rich blessing rested on this house then, and the widow's God had charge of us and all our affairs We wanted no good thing

I grew up to be a sprace young fellow They said I was good looking, and I knew I was smart at my work and kind to my mother and the children When I began to talk about looking for a wife, my mother said

'You had better build a front to your house first, and after the cage is ready, get the bird'

And so I meant to do, but my plans about that time got all upset I came across the lady—and there was another twinkle in his eyes,—when I was about twenty two, and then I could not stop to build So I told my mother that I would bring my bird home to the old cage, and let her have her own way about a new one and it should be as fine as she pleased Well, one day—it was a clear morning in June—when the trees were white with blossoms, I started on horseback, with a pillion fastened to my saddle, and the next day I came back with her behind me That was the only time she was ever behind me when any good was going on—she's always been ahead, encouraging me.

After she got a feeling a little at home I broke the subject of a new front to the house, but she said, 'It is large enough, as the boys—my brothers—were soon going away, and that if we were thankful, it was good enough for us, and if not, then it was too good, that we had better wait till we felt that we needed more room and more show'

So I left it with her, and more than half a century has flown by, and we've been so contented here, both with our children and without them, that we love the old black house overhead, and every old door latch, that other folks would change for brass knobs, has music for us. As we've waited so long, I guess it's hardly worth while for us to make any change now till we move into the house of many mansions God grant the break between us may not be a long one! I am not looking for any such mighty change as to happiness as most people expect in Heaven She and I,' he said, laying his hand tenderly on the shoulder of his faded beauty, 'won't love each other any better, now we are older, not a bit more we shall do so there; and the difference will be that we shall do it day and night without trouble and or sin'

He had a fit of coughing in spite of himself, and when it was ended the blood of her life has been smooth, with no poverty or sorrow to cloud our morning or rebellion against God'

There was a moment's silence. A faint, [illegible] We are God's children, and I know I have left without chastening. Night we have sat here between light and dark, watching and praying for the room, over cold [illegible] And as to poverty [illegible] had these forty five years. We had an easy life, with not a care that mortal could relieve us of, and even my affections have been starting at with mercy than what sometimes looked like a curse in the distance has proved a blessing when it came near If there had not been so much happiness here —if I hadn't been loved so well and taken such tender care of, I suppose I should have wanted a fine house, and grand clothes and jewelry, and the like, as some of my neighbors have, and might have run my husband in debt, and crippled him so that he could not bear burdens in God's house nor help to send the gospel abroad Tell you, friends, real love works wonders in a house. It has filled my heart so full that I have not had to depend for comfort on what my neighbors said or thought of me

And the years flew on, and the shadows gathered after this and still the old pair toddled on alone in the cottage They might have had younger hands to perform their simple domestic labors, but they loved still to live in and for each other

The wife failed first, and than he, whose manliness had never been lessened by household works not his own, performed for her the tenderest labors of love And when at length another must make the fire and prepare the food he only could nurse and comfort her With his own hands he combed her long and silver hair, bound it up, and replacing her snowy cap, would stroke her head saying proudly,—

'Well, after all the years and sorrows you have seen, dearest there's not a handsomer woman now in R

And, in a sense he spoke the truth for her's was that beauty of expression which never fades with youth, or dies with old age Her's was to the last a face of rare sweetness and beauty

The last day came when flesh and blood failed her, and when leaning on her Beloved, she let go the hand which had so long upheld here—thy steps Her last words were to him

On yonder side before you—only a step before you, dearest — His rod and his staff they comfort me and they will comfort you Good night—good night'

When his faithful aid his lost treasure among her buried children, he returned to spend his inch of life in the cause of his and her Redeemer A few lonely months, a few more sacrifices and labors a few more days of light and shadow, and the severed ones were again united

The quaint old cottage has passed into other hands but hallowed memories still cling around it for those who there saw the love that lives forever —[Watchman

The Power Required to make a great Snow Storm

We take the following from the Congressionals of March 15

A sermon preached by Rev J O Means of Roxbury on Sunday, Jan 27th having been alluded to in the daily papers, we have requested he privilege of making the following extracts from the same, and we are sure that our readers will find it both interesting and instructive

Perhaps to most persons the strongest impression of power in the snow storm is derived from being exposed to its violence It was enough to be out in it What wild turmoil what fierce blasts blinding, stiffening the limbs clogging all movements On Wednesday evening all things were moving on as quietly as usual At midnight the flakes began to descend Forty eight hours would more than cover the duration of both storms, leaving out considering all delays, losses wear and tear of repairs, a month will not undo the work of two days and nights and put us back where we were 'Who can stand before His cold' The steam engine is one of the mightiest instruments of man's power These flakes of snow throw up a breastwork on a night which a dozen of the heaviest engines could not break through And this great power, while laying its hand upon our activity, was doing the same in thousands of other cities and towns, the thousands of other streets and on our railroads scenes in our streets and on our railroads were repeated all over the Northern States and the Canadas When Gen Grant advanced upon Richmond he was obliged to gather up his forces and concentrate them in two bodies, he had no armies to spare for other campaigns But a power representing ten thousand times the power in Grant and Sherman's armies was operating along the whole line in one grand night assault over a space of thousands of leagues We know how useless to contend with the warring elements we found it It will help us conceive the magnitude of the power impelling he arrow to remember that in distant Minnesota, and all the way between, the same storm was raging

But this is only an outside aspect of a snow storm To comprehend the amount of forces we must notice the internal structure.

What is the snow flake? and how is it put together? It is a light, airy gossamer fabric, fragile, delicately molded But I dare not state the amount of force which is crystallized in it and is represented by it. Step into the great laboratory a moment when snow is making The raw material is hydrogen and oxygen, two simple gases, impalpable as air Combine these gases, and vapor is the product. Condense the vapor and water is deposited Freeze it under certain conditions, and we have snow Now to force oxygen and hydrogen to combine is so difficult this only enormous pressure will do it A pailful of water, let us say is nine pounds, the product of eight pounds of oxygen and one pound of hydrogen But in order to squeeze eight pounds of oxygen gas and one of hydrogen together and make them drip out water you must apply as much force as would raise forty seven million pounds of granite a foot high See Tyndall on heat p 104) If a ton of granite should fall down a precipice twenty two thousand feet high, the blow when it struck would simply represent the force condensed in nine pounds of water, and to turn this into vapor, to turn this vapor into snow crystals requires immense power in addition I [illegible] Prof Tyndall says the wild stone avalanches of the Alps which sweep and thunder down the declivities with such immense force are almost sufficient to start the storm [illegible] I have also seen snow flakes descending so softly as not to hurt the fragile spangles of which they were composed yet to produce from aqueous vapor a quantity of that tender material which a child could carry demands an exert on of energy commensurate to gather up the shattered blocks of the largest stone avalanche I have ever seen and pitch them to twice the height from which they fell'

Here is the force then spent in constructing, and embodied and deposited in, the nine pounds of water Now suppose nine pounds of water equivalent to one cubic foot of snow—really it is about half that—and suppose the snow fall of Thursday was four teen million million cubic feet, a small allowance, who can estimate the amount of force expended in manufacturing the snow flakes of that one storm?

Now let us leave the laboratory and see the power necessary to handle and distribute the snow as it is made. Have you ever thought of the immense weight of such bodies of snow and how careful he arrangements must be, what power must be shorting up the atmosphere to prevent the snow from being precipitated in vast solid masses launched what absolutely Almighty strength of the arm by which can hold this ponderous element over our heads in the atmosphere and not pitch it out when it is to come but lower it down gently flake by flake!

The great storms frequently extend from the Rock Mountains over the whole tier of our Northern States and the Canadas, to the ocean, and far into it. The area of our Northern States alone, not reckoning in the great lakes, is 500,000 square miles, and it is safe to say the snow of that week covered so much more. After this strange depth to [illegible] Have watched newly fallen snow but one week [illegible] Texas fifteen pounds to the square foot [illegible] [illegible] Tyndall says the wild [illegible] [illegible] Mary's [illegible] And as to power [illegible]
